

Respecting Our Lost Sisters in Spirit:

Notice to Identify Missing and Murdered Aboriginal Women

The Sisters in Spirit initiative undertaken by the Native Women's Association of Canada (NWAC) is a long-term research, education and policy initiative designed to increase public knowledge and understanding about gendered racism against Aboriginal women resulting in their disappearance or death. The initiative is dedicated to increasing the personal safety and security of all Aboriginal women and girls in Canada by implementing a research for policy change and education initiative.

You are being asked to provide information on your relative or friend who is missing or murdered for the purposes of collecting information to be used in a database. The information in the database will be used for statistical analysis and results will be presented as summaries or descriptive statistics, without mentioning specific individual's names. The results of the analysis will also be used to provide information and guidance to NWAC for the development of reports, papers and presentations on issues associated with violence against Aboriginal women.
